

After Second Presidential Debate, Undecideds Move Toward Obama – Obama 57%, McCain 43%

Nearly Two Thirds (61%) Think Obama Performed Better in Town Hall Debate

Undecided voters perceive Obama as stronger on key issues -- change (Obama 69%/McCain 31%), helping the middle class (Obama 73%/McCain 27%) and creating jobs (Obama 63%/McCain 37%)

Ipsos Public Affairs

Public Release Date: Wednesday, October 8, 2008 7:00 pm, EST

Ipsos Public Affairs is a non-partisan, objective, survey-based research practice made up of seasoned professionals. We conduct strategic research initiatives for a diverse number of American and international organizations, based not only on public opinion research, but elite stakeholder, corporate, and media opinion research.

Ipsos Public Affairs conducts national and international public opinion polling on behalf of The McClatchy Company, the third-largest newspaper company in the United States, a leading newspaper and internet publisher dedicated to the values of quality journalism, free expression and community service. Building on a 151-year legacy of independence, the company's newspapers and websites are steadfast defenders of First Amendment values and advocates for the communities they serve. Ipsos Public Affairs is a member of the Ipsos Group, a leading global survey-based market research company. We provide boutique-style customer service and work closely with our clients, while also undertaking global research.

To learn more, visit: www.ipsos-na.com/pa/us/

For copies of other news releases, please visit: www.ipsos-na.com/news/

After Second Presidential Debate, Undecideds Move Toward Obama – Obama 57%, McCain 43%

Nearly Two Thirds (61%) Think Obama Performed Better in Town Hall Debate

Undecided voters perceive Obama as stronger on key issues -- change (Obama 69%/McCain 31%), helping the middle class (Obama 73%/McCain 27%) and creating jobs (Obama 63%/McCain 37%)

Washington, DC – A new Ipsos/McClatchy poll of undecided voters who watched last night's second Presidential debate indicates that Barack Obama seems to be picking up momentum among the small number of voters who have not yet decided on a candidate. Before the debate, these undecided voters leaned toward John McCain (Obama 45%/McCain 55%) – but after last night's debate, nearly six in ten lean toward supporting Obama (Obama 57%/McCain 43%).

Both Candidates Improving, But Obama Still Rated Better...

Roughly four in ten undecideds feel that both John McCain and Barack Obama improved in relation to the first debate (Obama – 40% better than first debate; McCain – 41% better than first debate). However, despite the improvement of both candidates, undecided voters chose Barack Obama as the better performer last night (61% Obama / 39% McCain). In addition, Barack Obama is perceived more favorably following the debate by 31% of undecideds (12% less favorable), while only 18% of undecideds feel more favorably toward McCain (and 25% feel less favorably).

Obama Tops on Positive Characteristics...

The poll also indicates a more positive perception of Barack Obama on several qualities during the debate – undecided voters feel Obama expressed his opinions more clearly (65%; McCain 35%), was more likable (68%; McCain 32%), and able to think on his feet (63%; McCain 37%).

McCain Seen More Negatively...

John McCain, on the other hand, was seen by undecideds as more mean spirited (62%; Obama 38%) and disrespectful (62%; Obama 38%). The candidates run neck-and-neck on the qualities of understanding the issues (49% Obama/51% McCain), and being ready to be President (49% Obama/51% McCain).

McCain Holds a Lead on Foreign Affairs...

Undecided voters clearly see John McCain as ahead on issues related to defense and foreign affairs. Nearly six in ten (56%) trust John McCain more to handle the responsibilities of commander-in-chief (Obama 44%). McCain is also seen as stronger on defending the U.S. against foreign aggression (McCain 74%/Obama 26%) and working to stop the spread of terrorism (McCain 61%/Obama 39%).

But Obama Connects with Middle Class America...

On the issues which seem to resonate most with the middle class, Obama is viewed by undecideds as able to do a better job. Obama is seen as most able to bring change to Washington (Obama 69%/McCain 31%) and getting America on the right track (Obama 58%/McCain 42%). Barack Obama is also seen by three-quarters of undecideds (73%) as better able to help the middle class achieve the American dream (McCain 27%) as well as better able to create more jobs (Obama 63%/McCain 37%).

These are some of the findings of an Ipsos online poll conducted October 7-8. For this survey, a national sample of 389 undecided voters from Ipsos' U.S. online panel was interviewed online. Weighting then was employed to balance demographics and ensure that the sample's composition reflects that of the U.S. adult population according to Census data and to provide results intended to approximate the sample universe. Statistical margins of error are not applicable to online polls because they are based on samples drawn from opt-in online panels, not on random samples that mirror the population within a statistical probability ratio. All sample surveys and polls may be subject to other sources of error, including, but not limited to coverage error, and measurement error.

For more information on this news release, please contact:

Clifford Young
Senior Vice President
Ipsos Public Affairs
312-375-3328

Releases are available at: <http://www.ipsos-na.com/news/>

About Ipsos

Ipsos is a leading global survey-based market research company, owned and managed by research professionals that helps interpret, simulate, and anticipate the needs and responses of consumers, customers, and citizens around the world. Member companies assess market potential and interpret market trends to develop and test emergent or existing products or services, and build brands. They also test advertising and study audience responses to various media, and measure public opinion around the globe. They help clients create long-term relationships with their customers, stakeholders or other constituencies. Ipsos member companies offer expertise in advertising, customer loyalty, marketing, media, and public affairs research, as well as forecasting, modeling, and consulting and offers a full line of custom, syndicated, omnibus, panel, and online research products and services, guided by industry experts and bolstered by advanced analytics and methodologies. The company was founded in 1975 and has been publicly traded since 1999. In 2007, Ipsos generated global revenues of €927.2 million ($1.27 billion U.S.). Visit www.ipsos.com to learn more about Ipsos offerings and capabilities.